Winner of the Pulitzer Prize for History

Named one of the 10 Best Books of the Year by the New York Times Book Review

A New York Times bestseller

In this fascinating and meticulously researched account, Martha Brenner tells the story of the most famous hat in the world: Abe Lincoln's stovepipe hat.

Drawing on a wealth of primary sources, Brenner traces the hat's journey from its humble beginnings in a New York City hat shop to its place in history as an iconic symbol of Lincoln and the American Civil War.

Brenner explores the hat's role in Lincoln's life, from his early days as a country lawyer to his presidency and assassination. She also examines the hat's enduring legacy, from its use in political cartoons and advertising to its display in the Smithsonian Institution.

Abe Lincoln's Hat is a fascinating and informative read that sheds new light on one of the most recognizable symbols of American history.
