What is Hospice?

Hospice is a type of end-of-life care that focuses on providing comfort and support to patients and their families. Hospice care is provided by a team of professionals, including nurses, social workers, chaplains, and volunteers.

Hospice care is typically provided in the patient's home, but it can also be provided in a hospice facility or hospital. Hospice care is covered by most insurance plans, including Medicare and Medicaid.

Who is Eligible for Hospice?

Hospice care is available to patients who have a terminal illness and are expected to live for six months or less. To be eligible for hospice care, a patient must have a doctor's Free Download and must choose to receive hospice care.

What Services Does Hospice Provide?

Hospice provides a wide range of services to patients and their families. These services include:

- * Pain and symptom management
- * Emotional and spiritual support
- * Social work services
- * Volunteer support
- * Bereavement counseling

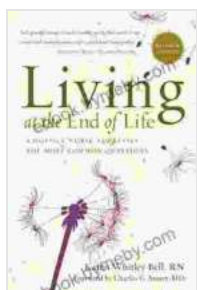

How to Choose a Hospice Provider

There are many different hospice providers to choose from. When choosing a hospice provider, it is important to consider the following factors:

- * The provider's experience and reputation
- * The range of services offered
- * The cost of services
- * The location of the provider

It is also important to visit the hospice facility and meet with the staff before making a decision.

Hospice care can provide comfort and support to patients and their families during the end-of-life journey. If you are considering hospice care for a loved one, talk to your doctor or visit the National Hospice and Palliative Care Organization website for more information.
