The three women featured in this book are:

- Sarah Churchill, Duchess of Marlborough: A close friend and confidante of Queen Anne, Sarah Churchill was one of the most powerful women in England during the early eighteenth century.
- Mary Wortley Montagu: A pioneering traveler and writer, Mary Wortley Montagu was one of the first women to travel to the Ottoman Empire and introduce smallpox inoculation to England.

- Horace Walpole: A politician, author, and art collector, Horace Walpole was one of the most influential figures in English society during the mid-eighteenth century.

These three women were all born into the aristocracy, but they lived very different lives. Sarah Churchill was a powerful political figure, while Mary Wortley Montagu was a renowned writer and traveler. Horace Walpole was a successful politician and art collector. Despite their different paths, these three women were all united by their intelligence, wit, and determination.

Three Lives in an Age of Empire is a beautifully written and thoroughly researched book. Amanda Vickery brings these three women to life with vivid detail and insight. This book is a valuable contribution to the history of the British Empire and the lives of women in the eighteenth century.
