Inside this comprehensive guide, you'll discover:

Chapter Nine: Motivation and Emotion

What Motivates Your Behavior?

Motivation: process that energizes, guides, and maintains behavior toward meeting specific goals or needs

Need: a state of biological or social deficiency

Need Hierarchy: arrangement of needs; some needs have greater priority than others (most crucial for survival)

Drive: psychological state that creates arousal and motivates behaviors to satisfy a need

Arousal: brain or autonomic nervous system activity (sweating, muscle tension)

Incentives: external objects or goals that motivate behaviors

Intrinsic Motivation: the desire to perform an activity because of the value associated with the activity rather than to achieve an external goal

Extrinsic Motivation: the desire to perform an activity to achieve an external goal

What Are Your Most Important Motivated Behaviors?

Signals From the Body

- Insulin: hormone produced by the pancreas that controls glucose levels in the blood

- Ghrelin: hormone secreted by an empty stomach, associated with increased eating behavior

- Leptin: hormone secreted by fat cells, associated with decreased eating behavior

The Brain

- Signals are processed into the hypothalamus and deficiencies lead to increased motivation to eat and restore homeostasis

- Region of the frontal cortex, gustatory cortex, processes taste cues (sweet and salty)

- Limbic System: region involved in emotion and rewards

Need to Belong Theory: need for social relations is a fundamental motive that has evolved for adaptive purposes

Achievement Motivation: the need or desire to attain a certain standard of excellence

- Psychological need: power/achievement

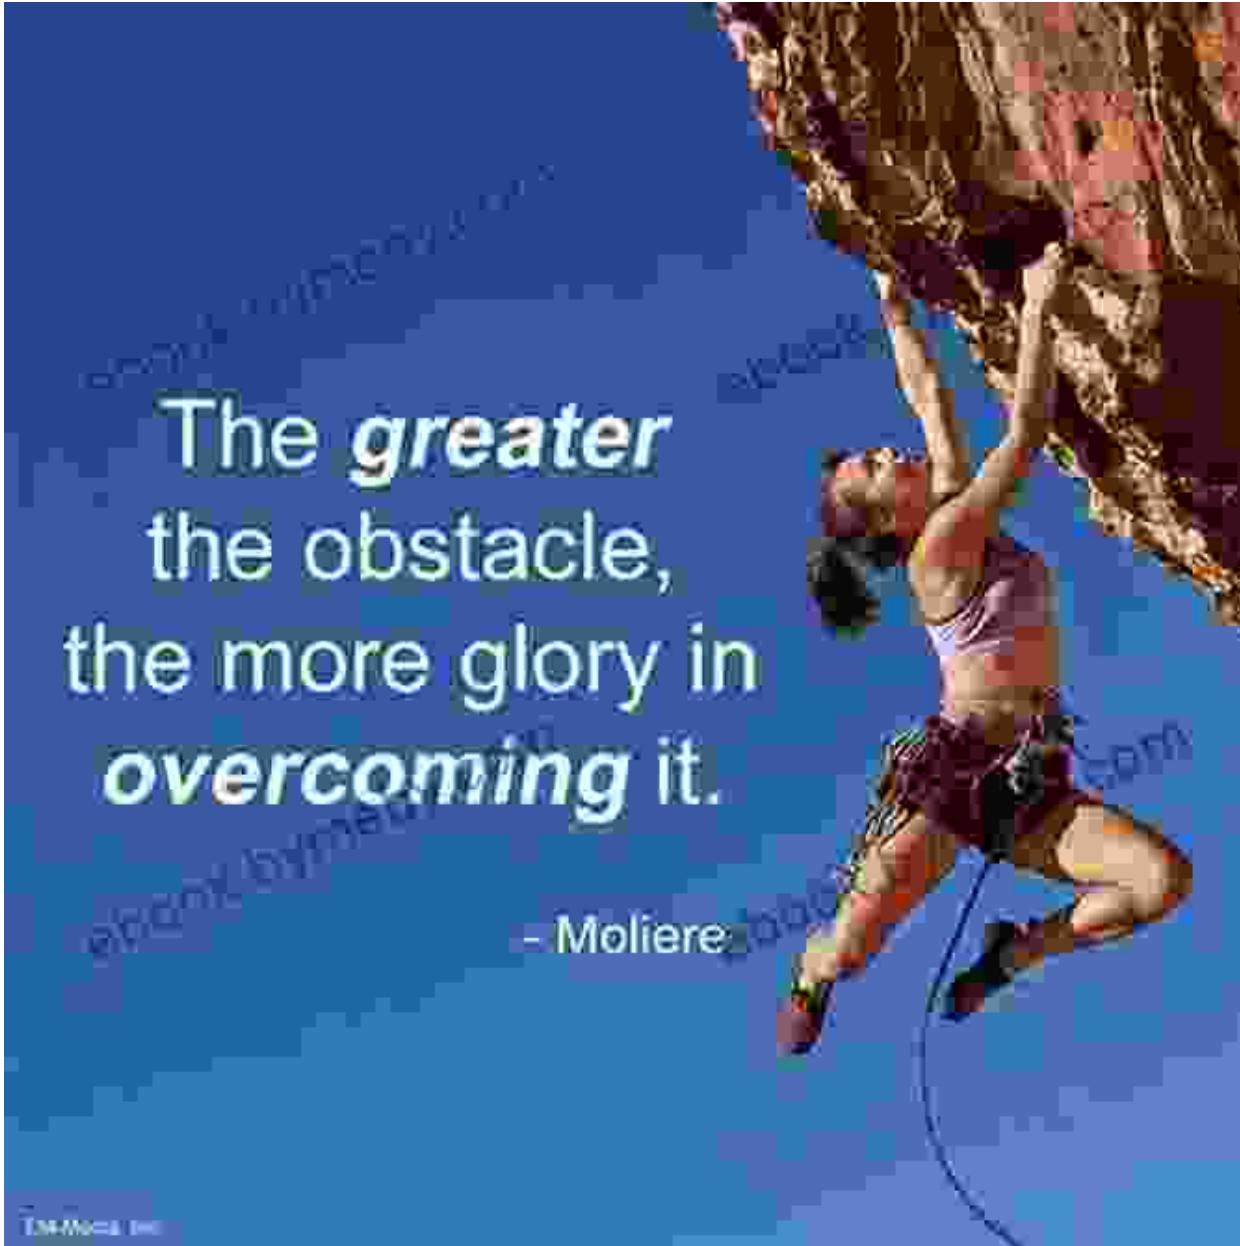

- People are more motivated to achieve long-term goals depending on how much they pursue challenging goals

Emotions

- Emotion: immediate, specific, negative or positive response to environmental stimuli or internal processes

- Primary Emotions: evolutionary adaptive emotions that are shared across cultures and are associated with specific physical states

The greater the obstacle,
the more glory in
overcoming it.
